History, Government & Geography
2007 to present

I am a twenty five year old Kenyan gentleman. I belong to the Abalubya tribe, which inhabits the Western part of the country. I was born in Nakuru district, in the Rift Valley Province, but began my nursery school education in Nairobi and completed it in Mombasa. I went for primary school education in Mombasa, and completed in Eidbu districts. In 1996, I proceeded for O levels in Nairobi, where I completed my education in 2000. After a period of two years, I went for tertiary education at Moi University, and pursued a course of Bachelor of Education (ARCS) where I specialized in History and Government, and Geography subjects. I graduated from the university in the year 2007, and currently I'm teaching at Clay International Secondary School, Ngomano, Kenya.

Teaching is not only a profession to me, but also a God given talent. I say so from the way it runs in my nuclear family. I developed an interest in the teaching profession back in secondary school, where I had that desire of acquiring knowledge, and also enjoyed enlightening other students on matters they had no idea about. I liked sharing with others.

Clay International Secondary School happens to be my second school to teach and I must say that I'm proud to be associated with the Clay fraternity. It's only two months since I joined the place and let me admit that I've liked the place and the people I've met. It's a lovely place that I'd wish to spend the rest of my career in. The reason I say this, is from the way I've met with students who are above average, and ready to learn. This gives me the motivation to work harder due to that morale. The students too understand the importance of education, and at least I know that my efforts are not being wasted. I'm optimistic that the hard work of the combined efforts of the teachers and students will bear fruits.

I can't pretend that I'm not noticing the continued efforts from the American sponsors. They are the pioneers of the Project Education Inc., and without them, we wouldn't be where we've reached, as a school. It takes a very generous heart to offer support to a stranger without conditions attached. The sponsors have gone out of their ways to uplift the welfare of these needy students, which will go a long way in boosting them intellectually. The efforts of the sponsors are also being felt by the entire community from the way the students try to change the vices of their fellow villages. All this is from the acquisition of the positive traits from the school.

Personally, let me admit that I'm benefiting from the continued support of the Clay Foundation. It's a privilege to work in this unique and one of the kind school and I'm grateful to the management for being offered a chance as a teacher in this school.

What I can request the sponsors is to begin other education projects worldwide, since they'll go a long way in uplifting the standards of the people globally, since education is the key to success.
